

In late August, Louise Abbott and Niels Jensen were invited to give a photo workshop for students in Arviat, on the west coast of Hudson Bay. Thanks to the generosity of Sony Canada, we were able to buy four digital cameras to donate to Arctic College, which hosted the workshop. The students went out with remarkable energy and enthusiasm and produced photo essays on different aspects of life in Arviat. We have stayed in touch with one of the workshop organizers and have learned that the students mounted an exhibition of their work at the community hall at the end of August and will remount the show at the local high school later this fall.
